ImageFIRST Offers Insights on How Medical Staff Engagement Impacts Patients

King of Prussia, PA – October 28, 2016 – ImageFIRST Healthcare Laundry Specialists announced the release of a new educational video on how nurses and medical staff engagement impacts patients.

Presented by Martie Moore, R.N., MAOM, CPHQ, the hour-long video, entitled "Is Anybody Listening? The Cost of Employee Engagement to Patients and Organizations," is a crucial educational resource for medical facilities seeking to improve the patient experience.

In the video, Moore explains to viewers why staff engagement has a profound impact on patients, as well as highlights how leaders can sometimes be disconnected from what actually engages staff.

Moore, who is chief nursing officer of Medline Industries, Inc., has decades of clinical experience under her belt and has presented nationally on improving nursing practice. Drawing on her extensive clinical and executive experience, Moore helps leaders eliminate tasks that distance themselves from their roles, and assists leaders to move forward by teaching them how to create strategies that boost staff engagement.

"Is Anybody Listening? The Cost of Employee Engagement to Patients and Organizations" is now available for complimentary download from the ImageFIRST website. Those interested in this educational resource are encouraged to visit this link to view the webinar.
